History

The University of Santo Tomas is the oldest existing University in Asia. The institution was established through the initiative of Msgr. Miguel de Benavides, O.P., the third Archbishop of Manila. On July 24, 1605, he bequeathed a modest amount from his personal funds for the establishment of a “seminary-college” to prepare young men for the priesthood. Those funds, and his personal library as Benavides’ will was enacted by his Dominican confreres, became the nucleus of the University of Santo Tomas which was found on April 28, 1611. UST was first called Colegio de Nuestra Señora del Santisimo Rosario, and later renamed Colegio de Santo Tomas, in honor of the foremost Dominican theologian, St. Tomas Aquinas. The original campus was located in Intramuros, the walled City of Manila.

In 1624, the Colegio was authorized by the King of Spain to confer academic degrees in eology, Philosophy, and the Arts. On November 20, 1645, Pope Innocent X elevated the college to a University. In 1680, it was subsequently placed under the royal patronage of Spanish monarch. It was King Charles III of Spain who granted it the title of “The Catholic University of the Philippines.”

The continuing increase in enrolment prompted the administration, on its tricentenary in 1911, to transfer the University campus from Intramuros to its present site which covers a total of 21.5 hectares in Sampaloc district. In terms of student population, it is the largest Catholic University in the world in a single campus. Since its establishment in 1611, the University academic life was
